Special projects and program trials often require additional staffing and manpower to implement and monitor critical parameters for an extended duration. Often times there is not adequate staffing available to perform the tasks associated with special projects and trials.

EQS can supply experienced manpower to assist in these situations. We can install and maintain the required equipment, provide on-site staffing for monitoring and sampling and even perform water testing to monitor results.

The potential success of these projects and trials is enhanced by the temporary addition of on-site technicians with specialized skills to assure the proper operation of the chemical feed and monitoring equipment used to conduct these projects.

EQS can supply manpower with a broad spectrum of expertise. Ranging from controls specialists to sample collectors, wet chemistry technicians and around the clock observers.

We can provide rental equipment and monitoring tools to assist in the execution of trials to help control costs.

In addition, we can install remote monitoring tools so that critical parameters can be reported wirelessly to enable remote control and observation of results.
